The Networked Society Symposium showcases the breadth of research occurring at the Melbourne Networked Society Institute. It provides an opportunity to connect, engage and debate the matters essential to the networked society. The symposium also provides an opportunity to network with researchers, industry, policy makers and the community.

The day will include keynote speakers, panel discussions with thought leaders, plus a variety of presentations focused on the issues, solutions, and future of the networked society. There will also be plenty of catered breaks with time for you to network with others and share ideas.

For programme information and a detailed campus map see the registration link below.
